

A VISIT TO QUTUB COMPLEX

Students of VII class went to Qutub Complex. They were fascinated to see the amazing architecture and were able to relate their chapter “The Sultan of Delhi” to it. The students were overwhelmed to see such a towering monument and various discussions were about it. Qutub Minar, the highest stone tower in India, stands at a height of 72.5 metres and was envisioned by Qutub-ud-Din Aibak as his tower of victory. Besides the minar, a mosque, the tomb of Iltutmish and the Iron Pillar, were the other fascinating attractions in the Qutub Complex. The Iron Pillar is a 7 meter column which stands in the courtyard of the Quwwat-ul-Islam Mosque. It is known for the rust-resistant composition used in its construction. The mosque was built by Qutub-ud-Din Aibak in 1192. The students were captivated by the magnificence of the monuments they saw. They thoroughly enjoyed walking through the complex and were exposed to yet another era of heritage through the excursion.
